*“He who sacrifices thank offerings honors Me”
~ Psalm 50:23*

The world is teeming with people who complain incessantly. Sometimes their complaints are valid but often they are born of a spirit of discontent. The danger of constant complaining is that it can become a habit. Eventually you forget that there are more things to be grateful for than to complain about. If you are presently complaining more often than expressing gratitude you are living an inferior quality of life.

A grateful heart makes getting along with others easier and more rewarding, it deepens your understanding of life and makes those who live and work with you happier as well. Never let a day go by without purposely expressing your gratitude. Open your eyes to the beauty around you and praise God for what you see or experience.

It is impossible to find someone who rejoices in God with constant praise and thanksgiving, but still suffers from depression at the same time. Human experience has proved over and over again that when you start thanking God for His gifts of grace. He is already planning the next blessing for you.

God's Grace

Life can suddenly become filled with problems. Regardless of their source, they dominate your life until you have found a solution.

Discussing a problem with a trusted friend often puts it in the right perspective. There are, however, some people who delight in talking about their problems, while secretly hoping never to find a solution, because then they won't have much left to talk about.

If you are experiencing a problem and sincerely seek a solution, direct your thoughts to God and don't focus on the problem. You cannot find a solution to your problem if you do not allow God to assist you.

Tell God about your problem, and continually confirm His might. Allow Him to create order in the chaos and to give you the right solution. When God becomes more important than your problem, you will be fueled by a spiritual power, because God is occupying His rightful place in your life. You will find solutions to your problems and by His grace you will be able to live victoriously.

Stay Focused on Him

The goal of your enemy is to rob you of your faith...and ultimately your will. The best way for him to accomplish that is to get you to take your eyes off Jesus and focus on negative circumstances. Whatever we focus on becomes our reality.

Let me remind you today that Jesus hasn't gone anywhere...He's still there. He still loves you. He still holds the key. He wants to be your reality!

John 20:27

27 Then he said to Thomas, "Put your finger into my hands. Put your hand into my side. Don't be faithless any longer. Believe!"

Reach out your hand today and touch Jesus!

Sweet Potato Casserole

Ingredients

- 2 pounds sweet potatoes, peeled and cut into 1 inch cubes
- 1/4 cup brown sugar
- 1/4 cup maple syrup
- 1/4 cup milk (or cream)
- 2 eggs
- 1/4 cup butter, room temperature
- 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 1/4 cup flour
- 3 tablespoons butter, melted
- 1/2 cup pecans, coarsely chopped

Directions

Boil the sweet potatoes in water until tender, about 20-30 minutes, drain and mash.

Mix in the sugar, maple syrup, milk, eggs, butter, cinnamon, vanilla and salt and pour the mixture into a baking dish.

Mix the brown sugar, flour butter and pecans until it forms crumbs and sprinkle it on top of the sweet potatoes.

Bake in a preheated 375F until golden brown on top, about 30 minutes

SCHEDULE

Have you ever had someone stare you down? Not even a friendly stare; just a look that makes you feel like you don't belong. Some would tell me if I just did this or that, not so many people would do that to me, but I disagree. Being different just comes natural to me. All my life, I was raised in a Pentecostal church. Like most Pentecostals, I stand out. At one point, my hair was to my knees before I grew a few inches. I live by all the Pentecostal standards. My life pretty much revolves around church, but I wouldn't have it any other way. Being different makes my life very colorful.

I think the most challenging thing about being different is convincing people I am not forced to be how I am; it is out of choice. Many people think I am the way I am out of force, but I choose to be this way. I could abandon my church and my religion, but I choose to stay where I am. It is my choice—not my parents'—although they play a big role in what I choose to do with my life.

Like Martin Luther King, Jr., I have a dream. A dream that people understand we should not try to be somebody else but to believe in ourselves. I remember a time in my life when everyone seemed to try to be like one person because she was pretty and funny, and mainly, she was popular. I would try to fix my hair in a fancy hairstyle every day and carefully choose all my outfits to make sure I was noticed. Then one day someone in my class wrote a story on how we should not try to be someone else. I remember it saying we should not try to act like someone else because everybody is different in their own special way, and we should not try to change our uniqueness. When I just heard that story, my eyes stung with tears, but I told myself I would not cry in front of my entire class. So throughout the next few days, I tried to look as little like her as possible. During my time trying to be popular, I was ashamed to wear a skirt. I convinced myself that was the reason everyone stared at me. So I focused on my shirt because my parents would not let me walk out of the house in a pair of pants. I would find my most stylish shirt and wear a pretty scarf or watch to accessorize so I would be more noticed and less plain-looking. Now, I realize that was a mistake.

Now that I understand what my mom was trying to tell me, I have tried to convince people who get called names like stupid and idiots, that they're not. They are beautiful inside and out. I have come across people who get depressed from getting called these names. A girl I know has tried to have attention drawn to herself by having several boyfriends at a time, mentally and physically hurting herself, and even once trying to take her own life. I think these people are the people we need to focus on.

Being different, people say I am good with words, and I can give people hope. If that's my talent, I want to use it. The Bible says we should love people no matter their circumstance. If we can show people they have purpose in this life, we can give them peace, joy, and love. And to me, that's what life is all about. Being different is not something to be ashamed of. It's just one of those qualities we have. It's not about being someone else; it's about being yourself. I think that was the message my mom was trying to deliver to me.

Being Pentecostal is not something to be ashamed of—it's who I am. My pastor once said in one of his messages that being Pentecostal isn't something bad. It's the best thing there is, and we should rejoice for having God's grace. So if we can convince people that life will throw curveballs at us, but God will be us through the hard times and the good, then we Pentecostals will have fulfilled our mission, and we can change lives forever.
